

ABSTRACT

A system and method of executing an interpretive language in a system having a processing component with native software processes and a memory component. A hardware component is coupled with the processing component and the memory component. The hardware component assists with the processing of the interpretive language and the system is permitted to execute the native software processes of the processing component.